

Joshua Joseph

Josh Joseph, son of Jim Joseph, is a man who wears many hats:

He is a real estate investor, always looking for a good value-add deal--though is just as conservative as his father taught him to be. Previously he worked for a big bank in institutional real estate lending, managed commercial leasing for a large private REIT, and co-founded a real estate tech startup.

Josh is an active participant and volunteer in the Jewish community. In addition to a love of many local Jewish institutions, Josh currently sits on the boards of the local Jewish Community Federation, the Jewish Community Center of San Francisco, and the Jim Joseph Foundation. He is also a member of the current Bay Area cohort of the Wexner Heritage Program.

A dedicated student and teacher, Josh was an English and Child Development double major at Tufts University and holds an MBA from the UC Berkeley Haas School of Business. He is always striving to add new insight to organizations with which he is involved, searching for sources of knowledge that affirm, elaborate on, or challenge his current thinking. Josh has also enjoyed volunteering his time to teaching at local schools.

Most importantly, Josh is a devoted husband and father. He lives South of Market in San Francisco with his wife and two daughters.