Rachel Levin

Rachel worked in philanthropy for 20 years before launching Fundamental, a boutique philanthropic and political consulting firm, in the summer of 2013. She began her career in politics and government, with the goal of creating social change through the public sector. Rachel then joined Margery Tabankin & Associates, where she helped establish the Righteous Persons Foundation (RPF), a fund Steven Spielberg began in 1995 with his profits from the film Schindler’s List. Today, Rachel serves as RPF’s Executive Director while also managing a number of other private foundations and grant portfolios on a range of issues including: shared democracy, civic engagement, arts education, and economic development. In addition to serving on the board of the Jim Joseph Foundation, Rachel is a board member of the Alliance for Justice and an advisory board member of the International Refugee Assistance Project.

Rachel is the co-founder of Reboot, a national effort to engage young creatives and activists in an open examination of their cultural identity. Rachel frequently lectures on philanthropy and generational change. She graduated magna cum laude from the University of Pennsylvania and was a public policy fellow at the Coro Foundation.