

Ariela Dubler

Ariela Dubler is the Head of School at The Abraham Joshua Heschel School, a Nursery through Twelfth Grade pluralistic Jewish day school in New York City. Prior to assuming this role in 2014, Ariela served as the George Welwood Murray Professor of Legal History at Columbia Law School where she taught Constitutional Law, Family Law, and Legal History. Her research and writing focused on the history of regulating sex, marriage, and the family in America.

Outside of her professional roles, Ariela has assumed a variety of leadership roles within her communities. She currently serves on the Boards of Trustees of The Dalton School, The Shefa School, and the Joseph Slifka Center for Jewish Life at Yale, as well as in the role of Honorary Trustee at Mechon Hadar.

Ariela is married to Jesse Furman and they have three children.
