

David Goodman

Program Director, Technology Strategy

David Goodman joined the Jim Joseph Foundation in 2025 as its first Program Director, Technology Strategy. In this role, David helps grantee partners utilize technology to maximize their impact in the community while also engaging in strategic thinking and implementation of new field-wide interventions.

David has over 22 years of experience in myriad facets of technology, working at large non-profits, small startups, and many things in between. He combines a strong systems and application management background with a solid grounding in business fundamentals. He has led innovation and technology efforts for companies and NGOs including NetHope, the International Rescue Committee, and Grey Healthcare Group, among others.

David holds a B.A. in Philosophy and Linguistics from Hampshire College, and an MBA in Management from Fordham University. He lives with his partner and their dog in San Rafael and can often be found on the local trails.
